

Summary

The invention concerns a covering material for liquid substances and product heaps and a method for its production.

The task assignment of the invention is to offer covering materials which effectively reduce the emissions, which do not have a disadvantageous effect on other emissions and which do not cause high expenditures.

The solution of the task assignment is effected with a covering material for liquid substances and product heaps consisting of an inert carrier material that is combined with active additives.